8 Steps to Building a Great Office Culture

Make your office a great place to work

We currently have full employment in the UK for anyone who wants to work, so finding and keeping good people is critical to any organisation's future success. Making sure your company environment stands out from the crowd can be a game changer when recruiting. Would you be impressed with your office as a place to work? Do the people that work for you think that your office environment is a great place to work?

We've got 8 steps to making your office stand out for 2019.

Get fruity in the office

New year, new you? Everyone wants to be healthier when we leap into the new year. Incentivise and support your team with local suppliers and have fresh fruit delivered to your office every week! This can be an easy inexpensive way to give your team a healthy boost.

Branded Photocopier

How often do your employees comment on how great the photocopier is?

Never! Why not turn your photocopier equipment into works of art that make your staff and clients see that you're a different type of business. Personalise your copier with your branding, pick a quirky theme that works for your office, the possibilities are endless!

Day light, all night long

Does your office space lack real day-light? Or maybe you're based in an office basement and rarely see day-light throughout your working day. The lack of real day-light, particularly in the winter months can have a real effect on your office atmosphere and productivity, so why not lift everyone spirits and with a skylight. Make your office feel like the sun is beaming, with clouds drifting by on a beautiful summers' day. Skylights will make your office feel bright and fresh on the darkest winter days.

A view with a difference

Are you looking for a unique way to bring a bit of life and vibrancy to your office? From beautiful natural views across meadows, to blue print plans and technical drawing or quirky landmarks that define your business. Lift your office look and feel with feature surface views. Make a statement that gets your office remembered.

Quiet room

In a busy office, sometimes silence is golden! Create a room with no phones, no music, no noise. Having a silent working space with no disruptions gives you staff the opportunity to get away from the hustle and bustle of the office and focus on high demand work, with minimal stress.

Office library

Encouraging learning and self-improvement ensures your team keep their skills fresh and allows the business to benefit from highly trained individuals. A business and personal learning library allows staff to keep learning, as and when they need.

Go green

People always say, “there’s nothing better than the outdoors”, but when your work is office based, enjoying a walk in the park isn’t always an option. So why not bring the outside in? Starting with the basics, you can introduce a few plants around the office to keep it fresh but what about some grass? It may sound crazy but why not pick a room to switch your carpet to artificial grass? This is sure to get your business remembered and stand out from the crowd.

Office pod

Struggling for meeting rooms? Or you just need a few spaces where you can have an informal chat without the entire office listening? Modern office environments are changing, and open plan space makes collaboration ideal, however, this often means there’s little privacy. Office pods are great for creating compact meeting areas when you’re low on space, need more meeting rooms and want to keep your office fresh and modern. Create engaging, dynamic working or meeting areas that act as a stand out feature for your office. Attract and retain top talent with modern open plan spaces combined with funky breakout and agile working areas.
